Women and girls make their communities thrive when they have access to good quality health services. The E4A-MamaYe project has been working to improve maternal and newborn survival in sub-Saharan Africa since 2012. We have learned that building local partnerships that connect health advocates with the media, government and health professionals gives them the power to hold decision makers to account for improving women’s and children’s health.

EVIDENCE FOR ACTION (E4A)-MAMAYE: LOCAL PARTNERSHIPS FOR ACCOUNTABILITY

1. Too many mothers and children are still dying from preventable causes

2. E4A brings together local stakeholders to work together in coalitions

3. To identify reasons why women and children are dying, through...
   a. Surveillance and response
   b. Scorecards
   c. Analysis of budget spending

4. And to agree on how available resources can be used most effectively to address these reasons

5. That way, government and health practitioners are better able to prevent unnecessary deaths and injuries

6. And more women can give birth safely

JOIN US!
Locally driven partnerships are the key to achieving better health for women and girls. Learn more about how they work to deliver this change. You can:

WORK with us to expand our reach to more geographies
READ MORE

SUPPORT us to scale up locally driven solutions to improving the lives of mothers and children
READ MORE

INVEST in locally driven coalitions, enabling them to hold government to account for quality health services for women in their communities
READ MORE

More information is available on the www.mamaye.org website

WATCH OUR ANIMATION HERE